McNeill Is Nosed Out 34-32 by Hope in Thrilling Game

Extra 3-Minute Period Required to Settle Basketball Tilt

REECE IS HIGH MAN

Ties With Pullig, of McNeill, Each Scoring 14 Points

After the lead had clunged hands a half dozen times, the Hope High School basketball team triumphed, 34 to 32, over McNeill here Tuesday night in an extra three-minute period allotted to decide the outcome of the game.

It was the most closely contested cage battle seen on the local court this season, each team frequently leading by slight margins.

When the game ended deadlocked at 30-30, Referee Kelley allotted three minutes extra time to decide the winner.

The Bobcats looped the basket for a two-point advantage, the visitors immediately retaliating with two points to tie the score again.

As the extra period drew to a close, the Bobcats counted two more points and then tightened their defense to ward off the desperate offensive thrusts of the visitors. The final whistle gave the Bobcats victory, 34 to 32.

Reece, with 14 points, was the scoring ace for Hope. Pullig, with the same number of points, was high man for McNeill.

Stewart and Whaley, forward and guard respectively for McNeill, were forced to leave the game because of excessive fouling.

The Bobcats will play Arkadelphia High School here Friday night.

In a preliminary contest Tuesday night, the Green Parrots of Hope defeated the Spring Hill Independent team, 28 to 25.

More Snow in Florida
JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(AP)—Snow fell here Wednesday morning but melted almost as fast as it fell. The temperature here was 47 degrees and at Miami, 40.

Snow fell Tuesday night at Marianna, following a fall at Pensacola late Tuesday. The kids at Panama City, Fla., made up snowballs for the first time in weather history.

CHICAGO.—(AP)—The Chicago American in a copyrighted story Wednesday asserted that Byron Bolton, Karpis-Barker gangster, had admitted taking part in the St. Valentine's day massacre of 1929—the bloodiest crime in the annals of Chicago gangland—and had named his five associates in the slaughter of seven men.

The killers according to the administration attributed to Bolton, were: Fred (Killer) Burke, Claude Maddox, Gus

Federals Deny It

The actual machine-gunners, Bolton was said to have declared, were: Hiss, Maddox, Humphreys and Winkler.

Karpis in Canada?
DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—Alvin Karpis, fast-fleeing public enemy No. 1, was being sought Tuesday night along both sides of the United States-Canada boundary line, with Ontario provincial police joining Michigan state officers and Department of Justice agents in the chase.

The trail of Karpis and his companion, Harry Campbell, lost near Philadelphia after they shot their way from a police trap in Atlantic City Sunday, was believed picked up again with the finding of a car near Monroe, Mich., which had been taken from an

Personal Injury Suit Put on Trial

E. West vs. Bruner-Ivory Handle Co. Heard at Washington

The adjourned term of circuit court at Washington was drawing to a close Wednesday afternoon as arguments started in a $20,000 damage suit brought by Eddie West against Bruner-Ivory Handle Co., of Hope.

The suit resulted from an alleged knee injury to West while an employee of the company. The accident was reported to have occurred at the company plant when West stumbled and fell over a board walk with an arm load of handles, sustaining torn ligaments to the knee.

Completion of the West case is expected to bring court to a close, officials at the courthouse said.

Results of cases heard late Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday:

Leo Robbins of Hope, lost in a $3,000 personal damage suit brought against Missouri Pacific railway company as the result of an accident in Hope several months ago when a passenger train crashed into his automobile as he was crossing the railway tracks.

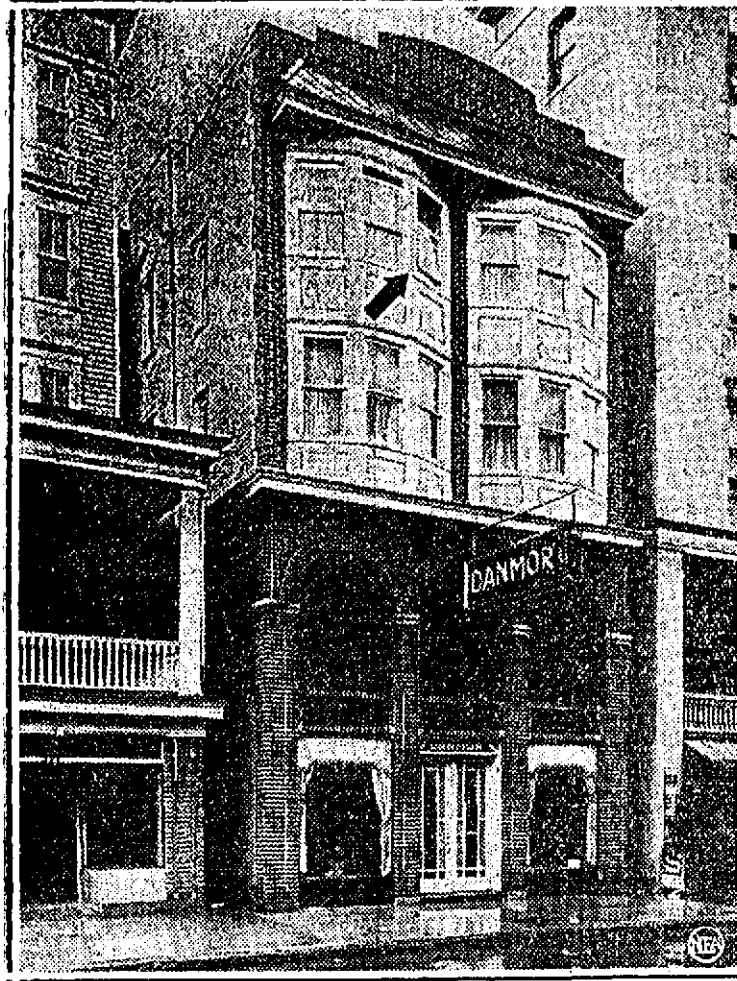

Bus Trotter, negro, convicted of embezzlement and grand larceny, was sentenced to one year on each charge. The negro was charged with stealing timber, and converting other timber to his own use.

George Lawrence, negro, burglary and grand larceny, sentenced to five years in boys industrial school on plea of guilty.

A negro by the name of Flenoy drew the same sentence on a plea of guilty.

The court Wednesday appointed W. W. Conroy of Hope, Hal Foster of Spring Hill, and Vernon Bryant of Bingen, as jury commissioners to select petit and grand jurors for the April term of court.

Paralysis Vaccine
PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(AP)—Vaccination against infantile paralysis will be offered to the public this week by Dr. John A. Holmer, paralysis vaccine discoverer. Each Saturday he and an assistant, Dr. George Klugh, will inject his vaccine into the arms of children and adults who desire it.

In testing his serum first on himself and his technical assistant, Miss Anna Rule of Nova Scotia, and then on 22 children volunteers. Dr. Holmer used weekly injections.

Links Hauptmann to Kidnap Scene

The prosecution has called as witness Millard Whitely, Lambertville, N. J., lumberman, who says he saw Bruno Hauptmann near the Lindbergh home at Hopewell prior to the kidnapping. Whitely is pictured in court at Flemington.

The defense put to the test the efficiency of New Jersey's police. Corporal Frank Kelly, state police fingerprint expert, was recalled to the stand for renewed cross-examination.

Interrupting the state's chain of evidence, Chief Defense Counsel Kelly charged that Kelly's methods of taking fingerprints, impressions, ruined them, and had him demonstrate to the court.

Kelly took a piece of paper which had been handled by three or four of the defense, but was unable to get a full impression.

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has rejected the terms offered by John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., shipbuilder, to identify Bruno Richard Hauptmann as one of the gang who tried to collect an additional $25,000 ransom about the time the Lindbergh baby's pitiful remains were discovered within sight of the child's parents' Hopewell home on May 12, 1932, it was learned Tuesday.

Curtis, who was convicted of knowing the actual kidnappers and of obstructing justice by failing to lead the authorities to their supposed hideout, stipulated that the slain baby's father should, in return for the shipbuilders' pointing an accusing finger at the German carpenter in court here, have a public reconciliation.

Wants Public Apology
"In fairness to me," Curtis informed Lindbergh through a high New Jersey state official, "Colonel Lindbergh must agree to pose for photographs showing us shaking hands. My reputation has been damaged through my efforts to aid him. I know Hauptmann is one of the men I dealt with. But I am entitled to vindication and I make this request for fairness to my wife and my little daughter."

Lindbergh informed of Curtis' proposal, decided the question of calling Curtis once for all.

"No," the transatlantic aviator snapped.

Announcement Withheld
Despite the fact that Lindbergh's refusal was made several weeks ago, Attorney General David T. Wilentz has carefully refrained from issuing a formal announcement on the subject. The possibility that some time during the trial the defense may definitely show that more than one person was involved in the crime, although considered by the state as remote, caused the attorney general to wish to leave the way open for calling the shipbuilder in rebuttal, should this be necessary. Curtis himself although making efforts through his personal lawyer to obtain an answer, has been unable to learn officially the state's current attitude toward him.

The fact that Dr. John F. (Jasie) Condon, who paid over the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom money, and Curtis, while negotiating for an additional payment of $25,000, were both sure at first that the man "John" was only an intermediary and not the actual kidnapper, also may complicate the state's case should Curtis, refused a hearing in public by the prosecution, be called as a defense witness.

Borah May Force Townsend Hearing

Administration Fights Shy of Republican's Debate Proposal

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A demand for a "full and open" debate on the Townsend old age pension plan came Wednesday from Senator Borah as congressional committees pushed ahead with hearings on the administration's social security program.

Without endorsing the Townsend plan, Borah said its widespread support entitled it to open consideration rather than being pigeon-holed.

Perkins Flays It
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Under a mounting blanket of snow, the capital hummed Wednesday with the activity surrounding the president's special projects such as social security, work relief and the World Court.

The president himself stated to the press his emphatic opposition to Senator Norris' proposal that a two-thirds senate vote be required on any proposition affecting this country to be submitted to the World Court.

Secretary Perkins assailed the Townsend old age pension plan.

A "Reasonable Start"
"We realize that this does not provide a hundred per cent panacea," Mrs. Perkins said, "but it seemed better rather than to take too big a plunge."

The secretary appeared after an administration expert had said the unemployment insurance plan would put a fund of probably $2,000,000,000 in the hands of the secretary of the Treasury with which to stabilize business credit.

Edwin E. Witte, executive director of the Economic Security Committee set up by President Roosevelt, said such a fund of the reserve fund build up by a pay roll tax was contemplated by the bill. The committee helped draft the proposals contained in the bill.

Secretary Perkins said health insurance still was a matter of study and a committee would be ready to report in a month or so.

"We have recommended that the age be fixed at 65 for old age pensions because we realize that it has become very difficult for a man who is more than 65 to obtain a job," she said.

Bull White and Wagner said that if the unemployment insurance plan proposed had been in operation during the 1920's it would have reduced greatly

Expert Testifies Wood Came From Prisoner's House

FINGERPRINTS FAIL

New Jersey Policeman Unable to Make Out Test Cases

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—The wood in the Lindbergh kidnapping ladder came from the home of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a government expert testified Wednesday.

Arthur Koehler, expert on the identification of wood for the government, followed a string of ladder witnesses to the stand in Hauptmann's trial for the kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

He added to their evidence, tracing it to the final conclusion that the ladder came from the Hauptmann home. The defense protested that Koehler was unqualified, on the contention that there is no such thing as a wood expert.

The defense put to the test the efficiency of New Jersey's police. Corporal Frank Kelly, state police fingerprint expert, was recalled to the stand for renewed cross-examination.

Many Differ On Foods in Arthritis Cases

Various authorities estimate that inflammations of the joints and rheumatic conditions are due to intestinal causes in from 20 to 40 per cent of cases.

One group insists that the taking of sugars is largely responsible, and they cut down on such substances. Another group claims that overeating of protein foods, such as meat, eggs, and fish, may be harmful.

You can see that people who regularly overeat ought to eat less and those who are overweight should take smaller amounts of carbohydrates. The sick person is likely to suffer in the nutrition of his tissues, and it may be hazardous to cut down too greatly on protein foods.

Some faddists insist on omission of all acid fruits and vegetables. The foods commonly called acid fruits include tomatoes, oranges, grapefruit and lemons. Actually these foods contain weak acids which are oxidized in the body and the end result is alkaline.

You should remember, moreover, that such foods represent the primary contribution to the diet of vitamin C and that they also provide a good amount of vitamin A. They are really essential to any well-balanced diet and there is nothing to show that they should not be included in the diet of a person with arthritis.

Quite recently some faddists have insisted that a person with a rheumatic condition should not eat a mixed diet and that the presence of protein in the stomach interferes with the digestion of starches. This is another indication of the lack of knowledge of physiology.

Meat and potatoes, which are especially rich in protein and starch, have been eaten for thousands of years. The digestion of starch begins in the mouth because the saliva is important in digestion.

This process may be temporarily interrupted in the stomach, because starches are not digested in the presence of acid from the gastric juice. However, the digestion of starch is again resumed when the food passes from the stomach into the intestines, where the juices are alkaline.

It has been pointed out that such animals as the dog, the cat, and the cow do not have ferments in their saliva for digesting starches and that in such animals, which live chiefly on foods containing starches, all digestion of starch takes place after the food has left the stomach.

Another group of faddists says that persons with arthritis should eat foods tending to alkalinity. The human body is a self-regulating mechanism which must always incline toward alkalinity, and it is rather silly for people to attempt to make any special effort to keep the body on the alkaline side.

A BOOK A DAY

Author Shows How to Fish for Trout—Exhibits Pictures of Likeliest Spots for Water Game

To the impatient disciple of Isaac Walton, champing at the bit to get out and fool a lot of finny folk, while winter's ice and snow keep him in hibernation, the best indoor sport is reading a good book on his favorite subject.

Getting to the bottom of the pile recently, I ran across one of the most helpful publications on fishing that I have seen my pleasure to read in a long while. It was Eugene V. Connett's "Fishing a Trout Stream."

Connett is one of the country's best trout fishermen. He has published several books on the art of catfishing fish, "Any Luck" being one of them. But his latest work is the best.

The author goes about teaching the reader how to catch fish by showing him how. Most books tell you how to do a thing, but Connett's volume, following the old Chinese proverb that a picture is worth ten thousand words, is gets over his ideas with illustrations. The book contains 94 pictures, each illustrating some special point in trout fishing. A few show stretches of a typical stream with leaders indicating likely spots where trout hang out. Others show where to drift, your fly to approach the fish without frightening it. A few show actual catches and the landing of trout.

Text accompanying each illustration briefly explains the point it tends to emphasize.

The pictures were taken by a photographer who accompanied Connett on a fishing trip. They are actual shots taken of the author during the stalking and capture of trout, and are indicative of conditions found on almost any stream.

Published by Derrydale Press, the book sells for $7.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Baby Acts Without Motive

So often in the development of a baby the things he does are considered either cute or naughty. Why must we take it for granted that the poor child has some motive for behaving as he does? As a matter of fact, his actions are spontaneous and are prompted by nature alone. It is we ourselves who interpret these little tricks to suit our ideas.

For instance, we laugh when, at ten or twelve months, he picks up a comb and tries to go over his hair. That's cute we think. But let him pull at a table cover or a lamp, or open a drawer—which he can sometimes do at his age—and get our best bridge score and chew it up, we get mad, slap him and call him a bad boy.

A little tyke like that (and even older) has no way of knowing what is permitted and what is not.

"No! No!" Futile

Of course, he learns not to touch certain things after several warnings and "no, no's." But it takes a long time and many repetitions. Impatience on our part will do no good. It will make him afraid of us rather than the article touched. Particularly if we slap or shake him or shout at him.

In every home there are things that cannot be put away and are dangerous to him. These are the biggest worries to the mother. How is she to teach the baby not to upset the fire-screen, or turn the stove key or lean out of an open window?

From a year on up these will be the very things he will want to experiment on. Being imitative he will attempt to do all the things he sees his mother doing.

The answer, you say, is to tie the fire screen, to take out the gas key and to lock windows. Which can be done, provided they are made that way. And provided these three things are the only things that could harm him. They are, as it happens, only a fraction of the dangers in a house.

It is best never to leave him in a room by himself nor to leave him in a roomful of other children who are supposed to watch him but won't.

Play Pen Is Needed

Play pens at this age are indispensable. Unless the baby has a special caretaker or his mother is free to be with him constantly. Play pens, however, can be overdone. Little children need more exercise than these permit. They need to run and climb and reach. Their mentality develops faster when they are out among things.

There are, then, these rules to remember: Put away as many dangerous things as possible. Strip the house of too many gadgets.

Fasten everything that can be fastened. Never leave him in a room alone unless he is in his high-sided bed or his pen.

Try to have one safe room for him to play in.

Do as much training as is possible at his age. This cannot be depended upon because his interest and curiosity will overcome his caution.

Never leave matches or medicine around.

Take out removable gas keys. It won't do to say or think that he won't touch things just because he has been taught. A baby is never taught. He can be disciplined, but at his age discipline consists of regularity in physical habits and little else. He will learn prohibitive discipline slowly with time but just now it can never be depended on.

CHAPTER VI

A GROUP had formed in the cloakroom near the corner window. There were half a dozen girls and women and, in the center, rocking with sobs, head bent so that Gale could not see her face, was a woman's figure. The sobbing that had been muffled suddenly became high-pitched, hysterical.

"What's the matter?" Gale asked again.

A woman she had seen often but whose name she did not know answered. "It's Mary Cassidy. They told her not to come back tomorrow. Poor thing—she's got two children and her husband gone. I don't know what's to become of her."

Gale moved toward the group by the window. A plump girl with red hair had one arm around the sobbing woman. The red-haired girl was speaking, low-voiced and comforting.

"You can say what you want to," another of the group cut in, "but I think it's a dirty shame! Mary's worked in this mill for four years. Just because old Thatcher sees a way to squeeze out more money for the company, make the rest of us work harder and pay us less he's willing for her to starve! Her and her children. But what does Thatcher care? I think—"

"Mary isn't going to starve," Gale cut in. "Don't say such things Wilma. Maybe it's only for a day or two—maybe Mary'll be back at work next week."

"That's what they told her," the red-haired girl agreed. "They said when there's an opening they'll send her word."

"Oh, sure! Haven't they told plenty of others the same thing?" the girl called Wilma demanded eyes flashing. "How about Jeh Nellis—and Sarah Butler—and Daisy Shultzman? They were going to take them back 'as soon as there was an opening,' too, weren't they? That's what they always say. After that they forget about you. They make the rest of us work harder, speed up the machines and cut our pay—"

"Well, have to do what we can for Mary," Gale nodded thoughtfully. "We'll all have to help her. Well—good night, Josie."

"Sh!" An older woman said warningly. "Do you want everybody to hear you?"

"I don't care who hears me!" the other insisted, but her voice dropped.

"There's no use talking that way, Wilma Claridge," the red-haired girl spoke up. "What are you trying to do—make Mary feel worse than she does?"

Gale Henderson had edged her way into the group. The woman who had been weeping hysterically was quieter now. Gale put a hand on the woman's arm. "Listen, Mary," she said, "you mustn't feel so dreadfully."

MARY CASSIDY raised her head dabbled at her eyes. "It's the kids," she gulped. "It wouldn't be so bad if it was only me. How'm I goin' to get anything for the kids to eat if I can't work? Where'll they stay?" Her eyes filled with tears again. "The rent's back two months now," she went on. "They'll put us out—"

Gale interrupted. "No," she said. "They won't put you out. Maybe next week you'll be back working again. If there's anything you want tonight come over to our house. Or no—I'll drop in to see you. Right after dinner. And remember it doesn't help to worry."

Others spoke up encouragingly, over-cheerfully. The false note of confidence in their voices was obvious, but Mary Cassidy dried her red-rimmed eyes. Sure, they told her, more than likely she'd be back at the mill in a few days. Not more than a week. In the meantime there were others similar to Gale's. No one had much to give; of what they had they were willing to share.

Gale and Josie Gridley walked down the corridor together. Gale said, "It's too bad about Mary."

"It's the limit!" Josie agreed vehemently. "Wilma was right about it—every word she said!"

"Maybe, but that doesn't help Mary any."

Josie tugged at her hat brim, slanting it smartly over one eye, and considered the effect in a pocket mirror. "Do you think they'll take her back?" she asked.

"I don't know. Mary doesn't work very fast—"

"That's the trouble," Josie frowned. "That's what's got me worried. She doesn't work fast and I don't know—she can't seem to stand it the way the rest of us do. You can tell by the way she looks nights, so tired and worn-out. There's worse things than being tired, though. One of 'em's being hungry."

"We'll have to do what we can for Mary," Gale nodded thoughtfully. "We'll all have to help her. Well—good night, Josie."

"G'night."

The two girls parted.

It was three hours later. Gale Henderson stood in a bare, half-furnished kitchen and put a stick of wood into a smoking, feebly burning stove. Gale had her conf on. Mary Cassidy, in a worn, green-spotted dress and an old sweater, sat in a rocking chair, a child in her arms. There was another child—a little girl who looked about six years old—in the shadows across the room.

The child in Mary's arms coughed hoarsely, its body shaking with the effort.

"How long's he been like this?" Gale asked over her shoulder.

"Ever since I got home."

"But, Mary, you can't stay here like this—without heat or anything to eat and that baby sick."

The other woman turned. "Where else can I go?" she said. "What'll I do?"

"My brother's bringing some coal," Gale told her, "and there are potatoes and bread and canned tomatoes in that basket. But, Mary, I think you should have a doctor. The way that baby coughs—"

Mary Cassidy folded the blanket closer about the child in her arms. "I tried to get Doc Summers," she said. "I sent Ruthie but he said, no, he couldn't come because I don't work at the mill no more."

There was a knock at the door and Gale opened it. A short, stout woman in a rusty black coat stood on the threshold. She had tied a strip of red cloth about her head in place of a hat.

"How's the baby?" the woman asked.

"I don't think he's any better, Mrs. Nicoletti," Gale said. "I wish we could get a doctor. He's been coughing—"

The child's body made a spasmodic movement and the harsh, wheezing cough broke out again.

The woman who had just entered started forward. "Croup!" she said emphatically. "That's what it is. My Esther used to have it every winter."

SHE turned and saw the older child standing, wide-eyed, in the corner of the room.

"Ruthie," Mrs. Nicoletti went on, "run down to my house and tell Esther to give you the bottle of ipecac. She knows where it is. And hurry right back! Your brother's awful sick—"

The little girl said, "Yes'm," picked up a coat and disappeared through the door.

"Have you got hot water?" Mrs. Nicoletti went on. She had taken her own coat off, was moving about energetically.

"I will have in about a minute," Gale said. "I've just got the fire to burning."

Mrs. Nicoletti bent over the child in Mary Cassidy's arms. She pursed her lips together, shook her head angrily. "Croup!" she repeated. "That's what it is. Listen to him!" The mother held the baby closer. Fear shone in her eyes, making the pupils tiny, dark points. "He's—he's bad, ain't he?" Her voice was husky. She spoke as though the words were being torn from her. "We got to have a doctor. I got to get one somehow!"

Gale who was working at the stove, trying to make the flames rise higher, turned. "I'll go," she said. "There are other doctors in town besides Doc Summers. I'll find one—"

Mrs. Nicoletti shook her head. "No," she said, "it ain't a doctor we need; it's ipecac. I know what to do for croup—didn't I bring my father through it every winter for four years straight?" She leaned toward the child. "Let me take him, Mary—"

"The water's boiling," Gale announced.

"Good."

The outer door opened and Ruthie Cassidy reappeared. "Here it is," the little girl said eagerly, holding a bottle forward.

"That's it," Mrs. Nicoletti agreed. "Now then, we can get to work!" (To Be Continued)

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Fine Hair Can Look Fine—Correct Coiffure Will Keep It From Seeming So

There's a good many nice things to be said about extremely fine, silky hair. However, question any girl who has it and the chances are ten to one she'll tell you it is difficult to manage, doesn't hold a wave and looks flat and thin the day after a visit to the hairdresser.

She should realize, of course, that her hair probably looks thin when, actually, there is plenty of it. The fineness of each hair accounts for the thin appearance of her coiffure.

Obviously, then, since it is not possible to make fine hair coarse (or coarse hair fine, for that matter), it's wise to make the best of what you have. A special hair style is your best bet.

One new coiffure, designed especially for a famous young screen star who has very fine, soft hair of a beautiful golden blonde shade, is arranged to make the actress, hair seem thick.

The hair is divided into square sections just as it would be fixed if you were about to get a new permanent wave. Each square is rolled into a flat, ringlet curl which is then pinned close to the head. When dry, the hair is combed and brushed thoroughly

Political Announcements

The Star is authorized to announce the following candidates in the Hope City Democratic primary election February 12:

and then usual-looking waves are pushed into place with the comb. Natural curly or permanently waved hair is necessary, of course. You can't push waves into straight hair. The back can be sleek or sections of it can be combed around the forefingers to make rows of ringlets.

NEXT: A coiffure for coarse hair.

A section of the department where Chesterfield tobaccos are blended and cross-blended.

Just what is meant by cross-blending tobaccos...and how does it make a cigarette milder and taste better...

Well, in blending you take two or more tobaccos and mix them together—a rather simple process. But cross-blending goes a step further...

IN making Chesterfields we take Bright tobacco from Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida. We take Burley tobacco from Kentucky and Tennessee, and tobacco from Southern Maryland.

Then in addition to these home-grown tobaccos we take tobacco grown in Turkey and Greece.

We balance these mild, ripe home-grown tobaccos with the right amounts and the right kinds of aromatic Turkish. Then, instead of just mixing the tobaccos together, we blend and cross-blend them so that all the different flavors go together into one full flavor—the Chesterfield taste that so many smokers like.

Cross-blending tobaccos as it is done in Chesterfields gives the cigarette a pleasing taste and aroma—they're mild and yet They Satisfy.

How great and good this world with all its chill
And change! Its storms of woe, its human ill
Cast only passing shadows from their sky;
And what dear sweetness even in the sigh
That guides our memories to a vanished day—
All wonderful, from youth's flight in to high,
Far heavens of hope on fancy's scornful wing,
Down to the frozen sod where blithely comes
The sparrow eager for his daily crumbs.—Selected.

list of depositories for funds of all political subdivisions of the state to be furnished by the state bank commissioner to local boards.

All public funds would be deposited on a parity with other deposits, but no deposit would be permitted to exceed 25 per cent of the total deposits in any bank.

The various boards would be authorized to contract with the designated banks "on the best terms obtainable," and it would be made a felony for any bank officer to accept for deposit more public funds in the aggregate than designated by the bank commissioner and in no instance more than 25 per cent of the total deposits.

The committee also voted favorably on House Bill No. 72 by McCall, relieving all public funds and their bondsmen from liability for loss of public funds in closed banks.

Revenue and Taxation
The House Committee on Revenue and Taxation voted favorably on Bill No. 58 by Pilkinton, which provides for the assessing and taking of deficiency judgments and Bill No. 32, by Miller, which would regulate the assessment of mortgages and of real estate subject to mortgages.

Other bills recommended by the committee for passage were: H. B. No. 57 (Thompson of Hempstead). To exempt postal mail carriers from payment of toll bridge fees. H. B. No. 115 (Childers). To authorize payment of school taxes with school warrants.

The committee discussed House Bill No. 76 (Buerkle), which would provide for redemption of lands sold to the state for the non-payment of taxes and make disposition of proceeds derived from such action, and House Bill No. 99 (Elgin), which would facilitate collection of state gasoline tax at state line stations, but deferred action.

House Bill No. 40 (Batts). To regulate traffic in furs in Arkansas. To be returned without recommendation to all who wish to introduce a substitute bill.

ly the effects of the depression. Shows Family Earnings
Wagner said a study of family earnings in the United States showed that in 1929 6,000,000 families received less than $1,000 a year; that 16,000,000 families averaged less than $2,000 a year and that 20,000,000 families received less than $2,500 a year.

"At the same time," he said, "the 36,000 families at the top of the economic ladder received as much as the 11,653,000 families at the bottom."

"These citations throw into bold relief the reasons why fully half of the 7,000,000 Americans who are now over 65 years of age have been reduced to a state of bitter dependency."

Wagner said it was impossible to calculate the precise sums needed to maintain the old persons on standards of health and decency.

Cost Will Increase
"But if we accept $40 per month per person as an immediate minimum goal for 3,500,000 dependent old people need assistance to the extent of $1,400,000,000 per year. And this need will mount with alarming rapidity."

The measure provides that state and federal governments would contribute jointly to the upkeep of the aged, the maximum to be given by the federal government to be $15 a month, which must at least be matched by the states.

Recipes From Cooking School

As Demonstrated at Saenger by Miss Jessie Hogue, Conductor of The Star's Seventh Annual Free Cooking School

Coffee Ice Cream
3/4 cups milk, 1/4 cup Morton salt, 3/4 cups coffee, 1/2 pint cream, 2 cups sugar, 1 tbspn lemon flour, 2 tpsns vanilla. Scald milk. Beat egg yolks adding sugar and flour. Combine with hot milk and coffee and cook on low heat until mixture coats spoon like thin custard. Cool. Beat egg whites until stiff. Add salt and fold into custard. Add vanilla. Pour into tray of churner unit and freeze to mush. Remove and fold in whipped cream and freeze 2 to 3 hours.

Potato Egg Salad
3 cups cold boiled potatoes, 1 cup green peas cooked, 4 hard boiled eggs, 1 onion, tomatoes and mayonnaise. Chill the potatoes and mix with cold boiled eggs, sliced. Add onion cut fine, add peas, toss together in french dressing and let stand 1 hour in refrigerator. Drain. Toss in enough mayonnaise to coat well. Arrange on lettuce hearts, garnish with sliced tomatoes and mayonnaise.

Molded Vegetable Salad
(Cardinal Salad)
1 pkg lemon jello, 1 cup boiling water, 3/4 cup beet juice, 3 tbsps vinegar, 1/4 tsp salt, 3 tpsns onion juice, 1 tbspn horse-radish, 3/4 cup celery, 2 cups cooked beets and garnish with mayonnaise to which 1 tbspn of finely chopped green pepper has been added.

German Salad Slaw
Shred medium size cabbage, place 2 tbsps oil in frying pan, let get hot and add cabbage and brown. Add 2 tbsps water and cook 10 min. slow. Stir 2 tbsps vinegar and 1 tspn sugar, salt and pepper, turn off when vinegar is added, let stand 1 hr, and serve warm.

Buffet Salad
Cup of lettuce, with small leaf, then thin slices of orange on lettuce, 1/2 lb beef, on a strip of lettuce, put strip of pimento across center of meat, 1/2 slice of pineapple behind meat, a green cube of mint jelly. Where strips of pimento meets pineapple, stick with almonds like a porcupine.

Sauce for Meats
3 tbsps butter, 1 small can mushroom, 1/4 tspn paprika, 1/4 tspn Morton salt, 1 tspn chopped green peppers and celery each. 3 tbsps flour browned, 1 cup milk. Melt butter, brown mushrooms, seasonings and flour that has been browned. Cook 2 minutes and add milk.

Chrese Balls
1 1/2 cups grated cheese, 1 tbspn pepper, 1/4 tspn Morton salt, dash red pepper, whites of 3 eggs, mix well together and mold with fingers into balls size of medium size marbles. Then, roll in cracker or bread crumbs and drop in deep hot fat to fry. Serve with a salad.

THE NEW DEAL

"end of the supreme court." Hereafter it has been considered a bit sacrilegious to mention the possibility of "packing" the court—that is, adding enough pro-New Deal judges to assure validation of new laws. Now you hear that sort of thing on nearly every other lip.

Yea, hear demands—in important quarters, too—of a constitutional amendment, in case the government loses the gold suits, which either would eliminate the court's right to invalidate an act of Congress or require prompt judicial review.

It isn't right, according to New Dealers, to have to go coasting along a year or two on a vitally important law, only to have the court threaten to upset the whole national economy by throwing it out.

Turn Back to Holmes
Some of the best heads dusted off an old declaration by Ex-Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and are prepared to use it in case a showdown with the supreme court becomes necessary. Here it is, as made before the Harvard Law School Association at New York in February, 1913:

"I do not think the United States would come to an end if we lost our power to declare an act of Congress void. I do think the Union would be imperiled if we could not make that declaration as to the laws of the several states."

"One in my place sees how often the local policy prevails with those who are not trained to national views and how often action is taken that embodies what the commerce clause was meant to end."

Some of the lawyers who sat through the gold case look for a five-to-four decision one way or the other. Although it's still generally believed the court "won't dare," suddenly increased indebtedness by 69 per cent, it is very genuinely feared that it may insist that the government pay its own bonds in gold or the currency equivalent thereof.

Some of the questions asked by Chief Justice Hughes indicated such a thought might be in his mind. Another possibility is that the court may demand that foreign holders of American bonds be paid off in accordance with the gold clauses.

Cummings Sees Light
One important result of the future created by the big news worry was the dawning of a cloudy with light on Attorney General Cummings.

Cummings, whose department is loaded with political hacks, remarked privately that he had heard various complaints that the lawyers in his solicitor general's office were doing a rotten job in presenting New Deal cases, but now realized for the first time that there was truth in them. He has promised that something will be done to remedy that situation.

Cummings made the star appearance for the government in the gold cases. But he dealt mostly with the flag, home, and mother, explaining how terrible things had been when the administration jettisoned the gold clause and how awful they would be if the

Cattle Buying in Nevada Extended

Agent Hiler Gives Extra Day on Account of Cold Weather

PRESCOTT, Ark.—Cattle buying in Nevada county has been extended one day, says J. L. Hiler, county agent. "Due to the extreme cold weather the first of the week," states Hiler, "many of the farmers were not able to deliver their cattle on schedule. A chance will be given these persons to deliver these cattle on either Thursday or Friday of this week."

"The county quota has not been reached, and those who have any old, unprofitable or unthrifty stock are urged to rid themselves of them at this time while a better than fair price is being offered. This is an excellent chance for our farmers to cull their herds and at the same time receive above market price for their stock."

Allentown (Pa.) physician. Belief that Karpis and Campbell might attempt to cross the boundary and perhaps continue toward Montreal, Karpis' old home. Led Ontario provincial police to cover the border from Windsor south to Amherstburg.

So hurriedly did the pair, who ducted Dr. H. H. Hunsicker at Allentown and then released him after a wild 21-hour ride, abandoned his car.

LAXATIVE MADE OF PLANTS
Thedford's Black-Draught contains active plant ingredients needed to stimulate sluggish, constive bowels to do their work in passing along the waste matters of digestion. It brings refreshing relief. Take it at the first sign of constipation.

"We find Black-Draught a great medicine for constipation which caused me to have headaches, dizziness and to feel dull and bad," writes Mr. R. M. Gabriel, of Huntsville, N. C. "I feel like a new person," he declares, describing the relief he gets from taking Black-Draught.

near a resort section of the Lake Erie shore line, that the motor still was running when a rural mail carrier came on it.

Dell Clark, the carrier, said he saw one man leave the machine and walk in the direction of Monroe. Little importance was attached to the find, however, until state police had examined it, noted the Pennsylvania license plates and found Dr. Hunsicker's instrument tags in the tonneau.

U. S. Agents on Trail
With the identity of the car established, Department of Justice agents joined state police and Monroe officers in a search of resort cottages along the lake and Ontario police took up the task on the Canadian side.

Federal officers directing the search on the American side of the boundary also gave some thought to the possibility Karpis and Campbell—if they still were together—might be making for the old Dillinger haunts in the upper peninsula of Michigan.

Lee's Birthday Is Observed by South

His Contribution to Reconstruction Days Reviewed Saturday

RICHMOND, Va., (AP)—Robert E. Lee, the South's great leader before and after Appomattox, was honored throughout Dixie Saturday on his birth anniversary.

His career as the chieftain of the South's men of battle was told again but it was Lee, the educator and public servant, who was praised most roundly by speakers who extolled his decision to lend his resources to the upbuilding of the nation.

His contribution to education as president of Washington College, an institution which after his death became Washington and Lee University, was told from lecture platforms throughout the South. At the university where the annual Founders Day assembly was held, Dr. Edwin Mims, head of the English department at Vanderbilt University, said "it is well to remember that Lee projected this institution at a time of far greater depression and that he projected it upon lines which have become increasingly important with the passing of the years."

He told of the human qualities of the man who still held his chin up after the surrender at Appomattox and who told the students of the university he later headed as president to hold no animosity toward the victors but to unite in rebuilding the Southland.
